

ABSTRACT

Method for calculating a deformation of a physical body under a load by forming virtual first to n-th material agents and boundary agents. A predetermined load is transmitted from the virtual first material agent to the virtual second to n-th material agents and to the boundary agents based on a material property and a strain characteristic of the physical body along a load direction and orthogonal to the load direction.